State Health Department Certifies Two North Dakota Hospitals as Level II and IV Trauma Centers

BISMARCK, N.D. – The North Dakota Department of Health today announced the certification of two hospitals as Level II and IV trauma centers, according to Amy Eberle, state trauma coordinator for the Department of Health. The Level II trauma center is Trinity Hospitals, Minot, and the Level IV trauma center is Pembina County Memorial Hospital, Cavalier.

To receive a Level I, II or III designation, a hospital is visited by an American College of Surgeons site review team, after which the Department of Health is notified whether the hospital passed the review. To receive a Level IV or V designation, a hospital is visited by a state trauma site review team, which reports to the State Trauma Committee. The Committee reviews the site visit report, determines the hospital's designation, and reports to the Department of Health.

Level I through V trauma centers must be able to accept and provide services to major trauma patients. North Dakota currently has six Level II, one Level III, 20 Level IV and 10 Level V trauma centers, which must seek renewal of the designation every one to three years.
